Fostering Siblings

As you might imagine, Toby's* world was shaken when he was separated from his parents and placed in foster care. To make emotional matters worse, he was separated from his younger brother when he needed that connection most.

That's why Denver Foster Care makes a concerted effort to place siblings together in a single foster home. Here, children find the reliable, positive environment they so desperately need with the added comfort of a brother or sister at their side. In Denver alone, 46 percent of all foster children have at least one sibling needing a temporary home, as well.

After all, family is what you count on to pull you through tough times. You can make it a little easier for a child in trouble by providing a temporary home for a brother or sister, too. Please ask your Resource Family Recruiter about how you can foster siblings.
