Denver Voter Registration is Complete

Denver Elections Division completes task ahead of schedule despite high volume of applications filed just prior to October 6 deadline.

(Denver) – The Denver Elections Division has finished processing the last 36,271 voter registration applications received from Denver voters between October 1 and October 6, completing its voter registration database. The Elections Division has processed more than 237,000 documents since January 1, 2008.

The division finished processing the last 500 applications today. An average of 44 employees working 12-hour shifts completed this project ahead of the original schedule. The only requirement for processing registrations is to have them finished prior to when voting starts; however, the Elections Division had a set a goal of finishing by the end of this week.

The division extends its gratitude to the individuals who completed this project for the hard work and dedication that made it possible to handle a record number of last-minute voter registration applications.
