

This information graphic shows how much people are biking and walking to commute to work, as a percentage of mode share, and shows that these percentages are increasing.

Biking and walking is increasing

Denver mode share

- In 2012, five percent of all commute trips were done by walking. This is an increase from 2006, when slightly more than four percent of all commute trips were done by walking.
- In 2012, three percent of all commute trips were done by biking. This is an increase from 2006, when two percent of all commute trips were done by walking