Arapahoe Square Design Advisory Board
The newly-formed Arapahoe Square Design Advisory Board provides an opportunity for downtown residents, property owners, design professionals and development industry representatives to help shape the design character of downtown’s next great neighborhood. The Design Advisory Board is an important part of a new form-based zoning and design review system adopted by the City Council in late June, 2016. This will be the first implementation of form-based zoning within Downtown and will provide a foundation for future zoning studies in the Downtown area, including the Golden Triangle. For more information on the proposed form-based zoning and design review system, visit: www.denvergov.org/arapahoesquare

Board Composition
The Denver Zoning Code defines seven positions on the Arapahoe Square Design Advisory Board:

- Four Design Professionals (architects, urban designers, landscape architects)
  - At least one of these positions must be filled by a landscape architect
- One property owner in the Arapahoe Square area (see map on next page)
- One resident of the downtown area (including the Ballpark, Curtis Park and Enterprise Hill areas, as well as other nearby parts of the Five Points, Central Business District and Union Station statistical neighborhoods – see map on next page)
- One development/construction industry representative (including contractors, engineers and developers)

All Design Advisory Board members must be residents of Denver.

Board Scope and Meetings
Starting on August 23, 2016, Design Advisory Board review will be required as part of the development review process for projects in Arapahoe Square. Board recommendations will be forwarded to the Zoning Administrator for project approval, approval with conditions, or denial. The board will be staffed by the City and is expected to meet once or twice a month at City offices in Downtown Denver or at a location in Arapahoe Square.
Applications to Join the Arapahoe Square Design Advisory Board
The application period for initial 2016 Design Advisory Board appointments has now closed. However, board terms will be staggered so that positions may be available each year.
