

Office of Human Resources
Engineer-Architect Director - CE2783

THIS IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT

General Statement of Duties

Directs functional and operational professional engineering or architectural areas, which includes developing annual and multi-year work plans and strategies, ensures resources are available to achieve work plans, resolves complex business issues, and establishes management practices and processes that ensure the accomplishment of performance standards.

Distinguishing Characteristics

There are four general management classes in the engineering series, which includes the Engineer-Architect Manager, Engineer-Architect Manager Senior, Engineer-Architect Director, and Engineer-Architect Executive.

The Engineer-Architect Manager is a first level management class. A Engineer-Architect Manager oversees a professional engineering or architectural work group within a division and is generally responsible for supervising first or second line supervisors and individual contributors.

The Engineer-Architect Manager Senior is between the first level manager and the mid-level management classes. The Engineer-Architect Manager Senior has multiple areas of responsibility over distinctive work groups and has independent supervision over each area. Additionally, an Engineer-Architect Manager Senior is generally responsible for supervising first or second line supervisors.

The Engineer-Architect Director is a mid-level management class. Engineer-Architect Director manages a division and is generally responsible for supervising managers, supervisors, and individual contributors.

The Engineer-Architect Executive is the highest-level management class in the engineer series. An Engineer-Architect Executive directs multiple divisions and is generally responsible for supervising directors, managers, supervisors, and individual contributors.

The City Engineer is a one incumbent class and the position is responsible for the financial, operational, and administrative functions of all engineering activities within the city.
