

COMMUNITY NETWORKS: STORY MAP FEEDBACK INSTRUCTIONS

As projects in the Community Networks move into the next phase of study, concept designs will be created to understand areas that need further analysis and set the vision for the corridor. These concepts will be refined through the design process with additional public input and analysis.

Your input is needed now to help shape these concept designs. To gather public feedback, the Community Networks team has created an online Story Map, which combines written information, maps, and survey links to give context and gather feedback about each project corridor.

The Story Map will be collecting feedback until July 12. Please share this information with your neighbors!

You can access the Story Map here:

Additional opportunities for providing feedback include:

- Emailing DenverMoves@denvergov.org with your questions. Please note that general comments and statements are best recorded through the surveys for each corridor. The team will only send email responses to questions about the projects. Please include the project name or Community Network area (South Central, Northwest, or Central) in the subject line.
- Attending a small group discussion with project team members during office hours for each area. Find out more at the links below.
