Hancock Administration’s Fifth Year in Office

A Letter to City Employees

Dear City Employees –

Over the past year, the city we are so proud of – our great city – has enjoyed significant success. Historic success. We are stronger than ever before, and that is in no small part thanks to the dedicated work of you, our city employees.

You worked to pave and plow streets, expand our parks and open spaces and keep our residents safe. You created plans that help our neighborhoods thrive, enlivened our communities with arts and culture and continued to open Denver to the world. You have given our children safe places to learn and grow and helped create jobs that will allow people to provide for their families. You’ve helped build homes, build lives and build opportunities for those who may have thought hope was out of reach.

And you’ve done it all while becoming a national model for how to run a smart, efficient and customer-focused city government through Peak Performance and Peak Academy.

You do this work every day – rain, snow or shine. I see the faces and hear the voices of the people that benefit from your work every day. I couldn’t be more proud as your coworker, your neighbor and your Mayor.

Michael B. Hancock
Mayor
