Denver Elections announces departure of Director of Elections Amber McReynolds

DENVER – Following seven years in her current role as Director of Elections and thirteen years with the Office of the Clerk and Recorder, Amber McReynolds will be leaving Denver Elections to begin the next chapter in her career. McReynolds and her team have transformed Denver Elections into an exceptional election office, receiving numerous national and international awards for election administration and first-in-the-nation innovations.

“I have been blessed to lead an incredibly talented and dedicated team at Denver Elections with a focus on improving the voting experience for all Denverites. Serving the City I love in a field that I am deeply passionate about is what has made my time here so special and inspirational.” - Amber McReynolds

During her tenure, McReynolds has shared Denver’s voter-centered approach with election administrators across the country. McReynolds will be departing on August 15th, 2018 to serve as the Executive Director of the National Vote at Home Institute and Coalition. This new position will compliment her extraordinary legacy modernizing the voting process in the City & County of Denver, as well as Colorado, by extending her expertise to other states and election offices.

“We cannot thank Amber enough for the dedication, passion, enthusiasm, and motivation she has given Denver Elections over the past 13 years. Amber played a critical role in modernizing the election model in Colorado along with many efficiencies and innovations for Denver. We will miss her and her visionary leadership, and wish her the best of luck in her new endeavor.” - Clerk & Recorder Debra Johnson

Denver Elections will continue to serve the people of Denver by providing fair, accurate, secure, transparent, and reliable elections under the existing award-winning leadership team.
