Denveright is a community-driven planning process that challenges you to shape how our community evolves in four key areas: land use, mobility, parks and recreational resources. Through four coordinated citywide plans, we will chart the course of the Mile High City for the next 20 years, while also identifying a number of immediate priorities to execute in the next few years.

RECREATIONAL RESOURCES
Quality trails, programs and amenities citywide
Enhancing our existing network to provide better opportunities and places to walk, bike, relax and play.

LAND USE
Neighborhood character, function and connections
Ensuring growth and stability in the right places to enhance the livability and sustainability of our communities.

PARKS
Accessible open space for all to enjoy
Providing quality open space and recreation across the city and ensuring our parks are maintained and improved for years to come.

MOBILITY
Safe and reliable choices for getting around town
Providing more mobility choices to help people and goods move more efficiently by the type of travel that best meets the needs of their trip.
We’re striving to give everyone in Denver a voice in creating the roadmap for how our city evolves over the next 20 years.

Denver by the Numbers

$300K
Home prices are nearly $300,000 more today than 20 years ago.

400,000+
vehicles on our roads daily. Lined up bumper-to-bumper in four lanes on I-70, they would stretch from here to Kansas.

Nearly half of the properties in Denver are within a 10-minute walk to a playground.

1 in 10
More than 1 in 10 households rely on transit, walking, biking or car/ride-sharing.

Less than 5%
of our land is undeveloped.

With 100,000 more people expected to live in Denver by 2035, how can we better prepare for our tomorrow, today?

How do we ensure adequate affordable housing?
How vehicle-centric should our city be?
How do we ensure equitable access to high-quality parks and recreational programming?
How can we maximize mobility for all?

By helping answer these kind of questions, you and your neighbors will directly shape the steps we take to address our growing city while protecting the qualities and values we hold dear.