

South Central Transportation Network: Project Updates

Happy September, Denver Neighbors! We are nearly halfway to our citywide goal of adding 125 miles of safe bike routes to Denver's transportation network by December 2023. As of this month, our team of dedicated planners, engineers, and contractors have successfully added 54 miles to this growing network! We want to thank each and every one of you for the feedback you have provided to make this achievement possible.

Goal: 125 miles by December 2023

54

miles completed as of September 2021

Engaging Community

Earlier in the summer, the South Central Community Transportation Team gathered your input on 11 of our project corridors anticipated for installation in 2022. Your feedback was received and is being incorporated into the design of these projects. Click here to review a summary of public feedback for each corridor.

Denverites Get Back in the Saddle for Bike To Work Day Today

Bike to Work Day is back! Today, September 22, 2021, we will celebrate commuters who choose to travel on their bikes. Denver residents are helping to reduce car traffic, improve air quality, and enhance their quality of life by opting to bike instead of drive. Pledge to ride and learn more here.

We're Updating Our Homepage

We are in the process of updating our South Central Community Transportation Network project website to make it easier for you to stay informed and engaged as we work to move more people, more efficiently and safely in all modes of travel. We'll be updating all project resources and adding an archive of our project newsletters (including this one!). All changes are anticipated to go live later this month.

Getting to Your Denver Events Safely

How are you spending the last couple days of summer? Whether you're catching a show at the Mission Ballroom, enjoying an escape at the Denver Botanic Gardens, or taking in all the art at the new Meow Wolf Denver exhibit, we encourage you to #curbthecar and opt for #bikelife instead. Check out this handy dandy bike map and plan your routes now.

South Central Transportation Network: Community Resources

Office Hours: If you have questions or would like to speak with members of the South Central CTN project team, sign up for a 20-minute appointment at one of our upcoming office hour sessions

Group Briefings: Request a presentation about one of the local multimodal projects for your neighborhood organization, business or community group at DenverMoves@denvergov.org

Project Hotline: Call our Community Transportation Networks Hotline at (303) 223-6575 and leave your name, question about the project, and how to reach you. Email us at DenverMoves@denvergov.org

Equal Access: If you or someone you know needs help accessing information on our project webpage due to limited access to the Internet, a disability, or is non-English speaking, contact us at DenverMoves@denvergov.org.

No matter how you get around – whether you walk, bike, roll, ride or drive – we are committed to serving you and your neighbors. All of the info in this email and more is available on the Community Transportation Network homepage.

Thanks for your continued involvement in this exciting effort!
The South Central CTN Project Team

Copyright © 2021 Community Transportation Network, All rights reserved.

Our mailing address is:
DenverMoves@denvergov.org

Want to change how you receive these emails?
You can update your preferences or unsubscribe from this list.