

Solar Outdoor Learning Incentive Program for Public Schools

ABOUT THE OFFICE OF CLIMATE ACTION, SUSTAINABILITY, AND RESILIENCY

The mission of the Office of Climate Action, Sustainability, and Resiliency (CASR) is to act with urgency to proactively mitigate climate change by advancing science-based strategies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions on a scale and timeline that align with the recommendations from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change; cultivate resiliency in the face of potential climate change-related emergencies; secure an economically, socially, and environmentally sustainable city for generations to come; and ensure that the setting of goals and metrics and monitoring of results considers equity.

On November 3, 2020, the people of the City and County of Denver voted in favor of Ballot Initiative 2A, raising the local sales and use tax by 0.25% to create the Climate Protection Fund (CPF). The CPF is dedicated to eliminating greenhouse gas emissions and air pollution, supporting climate adaptation, and creating new jobs to improve the lives of Denverites. This program will be funded by the CPF and is intended to address the following allowable uses contained in D.R.M.C. § 2-406:

- Increase investments in solar power, battery storage, and other renewable energy technology.
- Adaptation and resiliency programs that help vulnerable communities prepare for a changing climate.
- Job creation through local workforce training and new careers for under-resourced individuals in clean energy technology and management of natural resources.

SOLAR OUTDOOR LEARNING INCENTIVE PROGRAM

Public Purpose

Through COVID-19 disruptions, public schools have affirmed the importance of addressing the physical and emotional well-being of students and of providing engaging outdoor learning environments for students. For example, Denver Public Schools has found that environments different from the indoor classroom can help to establish a connection to nature, spark a curiosity in learning, and improve students' focus. Denver Public Schools has received $6.8 million in funding through its 2020 Bond Initiative to develop outdoor learning landscapes at 15 elementary schools as well as $3.5 million in federal funds to incorporate outdoor classrooms at as many schools as possible.

CASR is encouraging public schools to incorporate solar photovoltaic electricity (solar PV) into outdoor learning spaces because they will deliver significant benefits to the City and its residents, including the following:

1. Reducing fossil fuel consumption and greenhouse gas emissions in the electric system. The carbon intensity of Xcel Energy's electric system in 2020 was 0.474 metric tons CO₂/MWh. Over 25 years, a 30 kW-DC solar array at an outdoor learning space would avoid about 467 metric tons of CO₂ emissions.
2. Increasing the resiliency of Denver's energy systems. On-site and community located distributed energy resources (DERs), such as solar PV and battery storage, can be used for resiliency as backup power and for peak control to lower utility bill costs associated with energy and demand charges. Additionally, DER assets can be leveraged by the utility to provide grid services on an ongoing basis during the majority of the time that they are not required for emergency backup power. These grid services include: (1) reducing system peak and localized feeder peak demand; (2) improved renewables integration; and (3) reducing overall system costs.
3. Reducing utility costs to allow for greater funding towards public education. Lower operating costs can enable more funding to go to the services public schools provide to the community.

4. Inspiring the next generation of climate leaders to pursue careers in clean energy. Bringing clean energy systems to schools enables students to learn, interact with, and become curious about clean energy technology and careers. It complements Denver's efforts to create career pathways and enable a just transition to support a climate-resilient and sustainable Denver.
5. Evaluating strategies that lead to significant reduction in greenhouse gas emissions. The incentives awarded in this program will serve as valuable case studies for future efforts.
6. Protecting public health and survivability for communities most burdened by climate change impacts, specifically low-income communities. Emissions of greenhouse gasses cause climate change, and one result of climate change is an increase in temperatures in Denver and, specifically, more days over 90 degrees and for longer durations. Hotter temperatures for longer periods exacerbate chronic health conditions and unhealthy living conditions for people living in low-income communities, which tend to have less green space outdoors and less access to in-home cooling (both are respites from heat). As part of the global effort to combat climate change, and in alignment with the targets set by the Paris Accord, Denver's goal is to reduce citywide emissions 80% by 2050 to reduce this strain on residents. This program is one of many strategies Denver is implementing to achieve this goal.

To achieve the benefits stated above, CASR is offering a financial incentive for public schools to incorporate solar PV into outdoor learning spaces, funding up to 100% of costs associated with the installation of the solar PV. Without the incentives, public schools are unlikely to incorporate solar PV into such spaces and the ongoing operations and maintenance activities associated with them.

CASR has determined that the SOL Incentive program will reduce emissions and help Denver rapidly and equitably adapt to and mitigate the effects of a changing climate. It aligns with the Legislative Declaration establishing the Office of Climate Action, Sustainability, and Resiliency (Sec. 2-404 D.R.M.C.) as well as the Permitted Uses of Revenue in the Climate Protection Fund (Sec. 2-405 of the D.R.M.C.).

WHEREAS, incentives are needed to encourage public schools to incorporate Solar PV at outdoor learning spaces to further the public purposes above;

WHEREAS, the Recipient is willing to install at its location, which is located within the City and County of Denver, Solar PV partly due to the availability of certain incentives provided by the City, as further described in this Agreement;

WHEREAS, this Agreement, and the installation at Recipient’s location of Solar PV within the City will advance the valid and valuable public purposes set forth above by reducing greenhouse gas emissions and increasing student exposure to clean energy systems, as a result of the incentives described herein; and

WHEREAS, for these reasons, in consideration of the mutual covenants herein contained, and other good and valuable consideration, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties agree as follows:

1. RECIPIENT OBLIGATIONS. This Agreement and the City’s obligations hereunder are conditioned upon the Recipient installing Solar PV in its outdoor learning space located at _____ (the “Property”) as set forth in Exhibit A, the Scope of Work.
